

A man with dark, wavy hair, wearing a black tuxedo jacket, a white shirt, and a black bow tie, is seated at a black Steinway & Sons grand piano. He is looking down at the keys, playing. The piano is a grand model with its lid open. The background is dark and out of focus.

Ihab Ezzeldin is an Egyptian pianist, composer, arranger, and music producer whose work bridges the rich heritage of Arabic music with contemporary piano, cinematic soundscapes, and orchestral expression.

With a career spanning more than three decades, Ezzeldin has performed in over 1,000 concerts and events across Egypt and the Middle East. His repertoire ranges from original compositions and cinematic piano works to innovative interpretations of timeless Arabic classics.

His artistic vision focuses on creating immersive musical experiences that blend elegance, emotion, and cultural identity. Through projects such as Arabian Piano Nights, he presents a distinctive concert format where Arabic melodies meet contemporary piano performance in a refined international setting.

Ezzeldin has collaborated with major cultural institutions and international organizations and has released music through Universal Music MENA. His performances have been featured at prestigious venues and landmark events, including the Abu Simbel Temple celebrations, Cairo Opera House, and major international luxury and cultural events.

Today, he continues to expand his artistic reach through original compositions, live performances, and cross-cultural musical projects that connect audiences through the universal language of music.
